DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Presently, Memorial Beach Park is an open grass covered area from Route One, Marine Drive to the shoreline in the village of Agat. Running parallel to the shoreline is a row of young palm trees and in one corner of the park is a memorial consisting of an upright artillery shell and flagpole.

Prior to the war, the site was the location of Governor Shapley School, which was removed during the invasion of Guam.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Memorial Beach Park is a portion of one of the invasion beaches where on July 21, 1944, the Armed Forces of the United States commenced the Liberation of the Territory of Guam, the only permanently inhabited possession of the United States to be occupied by enemy forces during World War II. This invasion landed on Guam at two locations - Agat and Asan.

The Asan beachhead was the object of the 3rd Marine Division which consisted of the 3rd, 21st, and 9th regiments and landed at Beaches Red 1 and 2, Beach Green, and Beach Blue respectively from east to west. One segment of Beach Green where the 21st regiment landed is the Memorial Beach Park.

The day before the invasion, underwater demolition teams had marked the paths for the amphibtracs and landing craft to follow. At 8:29 a.m., the 3rd Marine Division landed at Asan following the naval bombardment. Once ashore, the Marines were in precarious situation, being confined between Asan and Adelup Points and faced with the steep hills set in an irregular area beyond the gravel road along the beach and the dry rice paddies beyond, with the hills being held by the enemy in prepared positions.

Once ashore, the Marines brought the artillery and situated it near the mouth of Asan River, near the present Memorial Beach Park. At day-break of July 22, the Japanese counterattacked, but were repulsed, whereupon small combat units of the 21st Regiment began probing up the hills. By the 24th, the crest of the hills had been reached. However, on the night of the 25th, the Japanese delivered their most serious counterattack and succeeded in reaching the rice paddies and almost the divisional artillery command post, but were repelled by hand to hand fighting which broke the attack by noon July 26.

Thus, the most serious battle for Guam ended with the Marines exploiting their advantage by taking the hills surrounding Asan and the Fonte Plateau beyond. Subsequently, the Marines linked up with Agat invasion forces and drove the Japanese north to liberate Guam.
